Precise Inventory of Collected Personal Data

The identification of personal data involves a precise inventory of the information collected, stored, or processed, such as names, addresses, and phone numbers. This step is crucial to ensure compliance with data protection regulations and to guarantee the transparent and secure management of sensitive information.

Clear Justification and Legal Basis for Data Processing

The reason and legality of data processing require a clear establishment of the reasons for collecting each piece of data. It is essential to ensure that the data collection is justified by one of the legal bases under the GDPR, such as consent, contract, legitimate interest, or legal obligation.

Explicit, Free, and Informed Consent Management

Consent management is crucial when consent is the legal basis for data collection. It is essential to ensure that this consent is obtained in an explicit, free, and informed manner, thereby guaranteeing that individuals clearly understand what they are consenting to and have the freedom to refuse or withdraw their consent at any time.

Adequate Security Measures for Data Protection

Security and data protection require the implementation of adequate security measures to safeguard information against unauthorized access or leaks. This includes the use of advanced technologies and strict protocols to ensure the confidentiality, integrity, and availability of personal data.

Reasonable Data Retention Periods

Determining the data retention period involves setting reasonable timeframes for how long personal information is kept. It is crucial to ensure that data is not stored longer than necessary, in compliance with legal requirements and operational needs, to minimize risks associated with data protection.

Conclusion

Consent management is crucial when consent is the legal basis for data collection. It is essential to ensure that this consent is obtained in an explicit, free, and informed manner, thereby guaranteeing that individuals clearly understand what they are consenting to and have the freedom to refuse or withdraw their consent at any time.
